

caa.reviews

This contract was agreed to on [DATE]

Dear [NAME],

[COMMISSIONING EDITOR] has commissioned you to write a review of the content listed below. Your review will be published in caa.reviews after it has been prepared for publication.

[CONTENT]

Before writing your review, please read the journal's submission guidelines at www.caareviews.org/about/submissions. The timeline for submitting your review to your editor is three months from the commission date.

The College Art Association requires that you sign the caa.reviews Publication Agreement and Addendum below prior to beginning your review by clicking on the button next to "I accept the terms of this agreement." Please print a copy of this document for your records.

CAA also asks that you review the Conflict of Interest Certification for Authors of Manuscripts Submitted to CAA Journals and then acknowledge that you have read the document. You will find this document below the caa.reviews Publication Agreement.

For additional information on conflict of interest please see the CAA Statement on Conflict of Interest and Confidentiality: <http://www.collegeart.org/guidelines/conflict>.

Thank you for your contribution to caa.reviews.

caa.reviews* Publication Agreement

This agreement sets forth the terms and conditions in connection with the publication of the above-named text (the "Contribution"), which has been accepted for publication in caa.reviews (the "Publication").

1. You hereby assign all right, title, and interest in and to the Contribution, including any and all copyrights, and any renewals and extensions under applicable law to the College Art Association ("CAA"). CAA grants you the nonexclusive right and license to reprint or otherwise use the Contribution in any format, provided that you give proper credit to the Contribution having originally been published in caa.reviews.
2. You represent and warrant that (a) you are the sole creator of and own all right, title, and interest in and to the Contribution; (b) the Contribution is original and has not previously been published by you or any other person in any other form; (c) the Contribution does not defame any person or unlawfully invade his or her privacy; and (d) subject to paragraph 3, that the reproduction, publication or distribution of the Contribution by CAA will not infringe upon or misappropriate the proprietary rights of any third party.
3. CAA requires that you determine, prior to CAA's publication, whether it is necessary to obtain permissions from all third parties who own rights in any photographs, illustrations, drawings, text or any other material (“third-party work”) to be published with or in connection with the Contribution. In making that determination, please refer to the “Addendum: Invoking Fair Use to Publish Third-Party Materials—Analytic Writing” and to the Code of Best Practices in Fair Use for the Visual Arts, available at www.collegeart.org/fair-use. For each third-party work, you must determine, in accordance with the Addendum and the Code, whether the use thereof in the Contribution is a fair use under U.S. copyright law. If you determine that such use is a fair use, you need not obtain permissions from the third party who owns the U.S. copyright rights in the third-party work and your representation (in Paragraph 2(d)) that the reproduction, publication or distribution of the Contribution will not infringe the proprietary rights of any third party will not include copyright rights. If, however, there are proprietary or private rights in the third-party work other than copyright, or if you determine that your use is not a fair use under U.S. copyright law, then you represent and warrant that you have obtained all such rights that are necessary to reproduce, publish or distribute such third-party works in the Contribution, whether in any hard copy, electronic or other form or media, and whether or not the Contribution or such third-party work may be individually accessed, perceived or retrieved apart from the Publication, as set out in Paragraph 1. In addition, prior to publication of the Contribution, where you are required by the foregoing to obtain permissions, you agree to supply copies of signed permissions or other clearances, in a form satisfactory to CAA, from the rights holder of each third-party work.

4. You agree unconditionally to release, and to indemnify and hold harmless, CAA, its affiliates and its and their licensees, and its and their officers, directors, employees, agents, representatives and assignees from and against any and all liability, claims and costs, including losses, expenses and reasonable attorney’s fees and expenses, that it or they incur as a result of any breach by you of any of the foregoing representations and warranties, including, but not limited to, liability, claims and costs arising out of any claims by third parties with regard to the publication of third-party works with or in connection with the Contribution, in any form or media. You do not have to indemnify CAA for any third-party claims of copyright infringement with respect to third-party works for which you have determined your use is a fair use in accordance with Paragraph 3.

5. This agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of New York applicable to agreements made entirely within the state. This agreement contains the complete agreement and understanding between the parties and supersedes all prior or contemporaneous discussions or agreements between CAA and you regarding the submission of the Contribution. It may not be modified either orally or in writing by any employee of CAA. The parties hereby consent to the jurisdiction and venue in any federal or state court of competent jurisdiction located in the State of New York for the adjudication of any disputes under this agreement.

6. By accepting the terms of this agreement, you certify that you have complied with the requirements of Paragraph 3 with respect to determining that your use of third-party works in the Contribution is a fair use under U.S. copyright law.

I accept the terms of this agreement.

I do not accept the terms of this agreement.

Addendum: Invoking Fair Use to Publish Third-Party Materials—Analytic Writing

CAA will not require that you obtain permissions for the use of images and other third-party works in the Contribution if you determine, in good faith, that your use of such third-party works is a fair use under U.S. copyright law. In making that determination, you should review the PDF of CAA's Code of Best Practices in Fair Use for the Visual Arts, which was sent to you when the Contribution was accepted for publication. You can also read and download the Code online at www.collegeart.org/fair-use/best-practices. For discussion of the fair use doctrine of U.S. copyright law, please see pp. 14–17 of the Code. A useful list of Frequently Asked Questions regarding the Code and the fair use doctrine can be found at www.collegeart.org/fair-use/faq.

Fair use can be applied only to images and other third-party materials to which the user has access. Sometimes, however, permission must be sought because a sole source controls an object or image of it, even when the underlying work itself is in the public domain. Because demands for permission fees in this context are not based on copyright, fair use cannot be invoked to avoid paying such fees.

Works in the public domain may be used without obtaining permissions. Even if the work itself is in the public domain, however, photographers of three-dimensional artworks (such as sculpture, architecture, or performance) or the organizations that employ them may hold rights in their photographs.

The Code provides that in analytic writing about art, scholars may invoke fair use to quote, excerpt, or reproduce copyrighted works, subject to certain limitations. For a summary of the limitations, see pp. 9–10 of the Code.

To aid you in making a determination as to whether your use of third-party works is a fair use, CAA suggests that you consider the following questions. These are not, however, a substitute for the requirement that you review the Code and the Frequently Asked Questions.

Does the analytic objective of your text justify your use of the third-party work? Can you articulate the justification?

Does your analytic objective predominate over that of merely representing the third-party work or works used? Does use of the material with your text provide new insights and understandings into the subject of your contribution?

Does the amount and kind of material used or (where images are concerned) the size and resolution of the published reproduction exceed that appropriate to the analytic objective?

Are you reproducing born-digital works in digital-format reproductions? If so, can you justify use and amount used where there is a heightened risk that reproductions may function as substitutes for the originals?

Does the reproduction of the work accurately represent the original work?

Does the text or ancillary material (title, captions, and so forth) give the attribution of the original work?

Conflict of Interest Certification for Authors of Manuscripts Submitted to CAA Journals

Please review the CAA statement below and certify that you have read it by clicking on one of the buttons adjacent to “I have read this certification.” This certification is associated with the following content:

[CONTENT]

A conflict of interest (“COI”) arises when an individual’s personal interest or bias compromises his or her ability to act in accordance with professional or public obligations. Conflicts of interest are not limited to the following, but may occur when an author

- has a personal or professional relationship with: the creator of a book, exhibition, event, or artwork discussed in the manuscript (the “work”) submitted for editorial consideration. Personal relationships that may create a conflict of interest include: immediate family member, domestic or professional partner, research collaborator, dissertation (or, in some cases, master's thesis) advisor/advisee, current teacher or mentor or current student.
- feels a sense of personal obligation, competition, or enmity toward an individual, group, or institution that is discussed in the manuscript or who created the work.
- was involved as an author, translator, editor, or in any other way in the production of the work.
- is under consideration for employment at the same institution as the creator of the work or when that creator is under consideration for employment at the author's institution.
- may obtain direct financial benefit with respect to the work.

If you have any concern that a conflict of interest may exist, you must disclose it immediately to the commissioning editor of caa.reviews. Please note that you may be required to disclose any actual or apparent COI presented by your manuscript.

Please check the appropriate box to acknowledge the following:

I have read this certification and I know of NO actual or apparent conflict of interest that my manuscript would present.

I have read this certification and I have contacted the editor or reviews editor of the journal regarding a potential actual or apparent conflict of interest that may be presented by my manuscript.

This page is printable from your web browser. Please make a copy for your records.

For the College Art Association, [DATE]